

Commodities Sentiment Report

2026-07-06 22:15 UTC

Previous edition: 2026-07-06 22:00 UTC. First edition to include the social media sweep (StockTwits, X, TradingView). News basis is unchanged from the 22:00 edition run minutes earlier; scores are unchanged. This edition adds the retail/trader social layer.

COMMODITY	SENTIMENT	Δ VS LAST	ONE-LINE DRIVER
Crude Oil (WTI/Brent)	-1 Leaning bearish	unchanged	Range-bound after 4.25-month low; social crowd bearish, watching $68-70 support
Natural Gas	-1 Leaning bearish	unchanged	Storage surplus rules the news; trader chatter says bad news is priced in
Gold	+1 Leaning bullish	unchanged	Soft labor market pins rate-hike odds; retail extremely bullish on miners
Silver	+2 Bullish	unchanged	Momentum leader; social crowd bullish and buying dips (contrarian flag)
Copper	+1 Leaning bullish	unchanged	Fed repricing + supply dents; bank forecasts circulating bullishly on social
Wheat	+2 Bullish	unchanged	Stocks/acreage misses; large traders still net short = short-covering fuel
Corn	+2 Bullish	unchanged	France crop damage + China tariff cuts; social chatter lags the news
Soybeans	0 Neutral / mixed	unchanged	China tariff plan vs big stocks; no fresh social signal

Scale: -3 Very bearish · -2 Bearish · -1 Leaning bearish · 0 Neutral/mixed · +1 Leaning bullish · +2 Bullish · +3 Very bullish. Sentiment reflects the tone of current news and trader coverage about the price outlook, not the last price move.

BIGGEST SHIFTS

No score changes versus the 22:00 edition run 15 minutes earlier — this run's news basis is the same. What's new is the social layer, and its headline finding: retail/trader sentiment broadly agrees with the news-based scores, with two nuances worth knowing. In natural gas the crowd is more constructive than the coverage (majority-bullish trader polls on the theory that bearish storage news is already priced in), and in wheat the futures positioning picture (large traders still net short) means the bullish supply story has short-covering fuel if it keeps running.

Score history (oldest → newest)

Crude Oil (WTI / Brent)

-1 Leaning bearish

What's happening. Unchanged from the 22:00 edition: WTI bounced off a 4.25-month low on short covering and is range-bound awaiting clarity on the fragile US-Iran ceasefire, with Saudi exports at 90% of pre-war levels and Iran moving 40M barrels in two weeks (CNBC oil, OilPrice).

Social pulse. TradingView trader chatter is bearish and sell-skewed, but focused on the $68-70 support zone — retail buyers are leaning on that support with stops clustered just below it, a setup traders flag as vulnerable to a stop-run flush (TradingView Minds, trade ideas). Crowd agrees with the news tone.

What it means. News and crowd agree: the path of least resistance is still down, but positioning around $68-70 makes that zone the next battleground — a clean break below likely accelerates selling; a defense of it firms up the floor narrative.

Natural Gas

-1 Leaning bearish

What's happening. Unchanged: two-week low around $3.17-3.23 on the larger-than-expected 87 Bcf injection (stocks ~6.2% above average), record production, and cooler forecasts (Trading Economics).

Social pulse. Diverges from the news tone. Trader polls skew bullish (retail ~55%, institutional ~60%) and the recurring argument in chatter is that the bearish storage story is already priced in near multi-month lows, with any hot-weather surprise flipping sentiment fast (TradingView news/forums).

What it means. The news flow justifies -1, but the crowd's "bad-news-priced-in" stance means the downside is likely limited and the reaction to any bullish surprise (heat, LNG demand) could be outsized. Watch Thursday's EIA print against this backdrop.

Gold

+1 Leaning bullish

What's happening. Unchanged: Monday dip to ~$4,140-4,166 on a firmer dollar, with losses limited by the cooling labor market; Fed minutes Wednesday (Trading Economics, Kitco).

Social pulse. Mixed-to-bullish: chatter cites the weak payrolls as support but flags overbought short-term technicals and expects a broad sideways range with mild bullish bias; StockTwits retail is "extremely bullish" on gold miners specifically, with very high message volume (StockTwits, TradingView Minds).

What it means. Crowd and news agree on direction but not velocity — expect chop rather than a one-way move into Wednesday's Fed minutes. The extreme retail enthusiasm in miners is worth a line in any piece: it's where the speculative energy is concentrating.

Silver +2 Bullish

What's happening. Unchanged: second straight ~3% jump to ~$62.90, extending the recovery from seven-month lows on safe-haven demand and Fed repricing (Kitco).

Social pulse. Broadly bullish — retail is accumulating dips, and StockTwits' SLV gauge flipped to bullish while GLD stayed bearish, confirming silver as the crowd favorite (StockTwits SLV sentiment, TradingView ideas). One contrarian note in chatter: sentiment this uniformly bullish is itself a caution flag.

What it means. Everything points the same way, which is both the confirmation and the risk — uniform bullishness plus overbought technicals means a hawkish Fed-minutes surprise would hit silver hardest on the board.

Copper +1 Leaning bullish

What's happening. Unchanged: holding near $6.17-6.20/lb after the Fed-repricing-driven weekly gain, with concentrate output declining at several South American operations (Trading Economics, Fastmarkets).

Social pulse. Constructive: rate-cut/rate-relief hopes dominate the sentiment framing, and bullish bank forecasts (Citi and Goldman raising targets, Citi citing ~$14,500/t next month) are circulating prominently in trader feeds (TradingView news). Crowd slightly more bullish than the news tone; chatter awaits China industrial data.

What it means. Social amplifies the +1 rather than contradicting it. The missing piece for +2 remains a China demand confirmation — the industrial production data traders are watching is the likely trigger either way.

Wheat +2 Bullish

What's happening. Unchanged: highest since June 22 (~$5.99-6.08) on below-forecast stocks (920M bu) and acreage (42.74M), against the smallest-since-1957/58 HRW crop; Black Sea supply caps the rally (Trading Economics, USDA ERS).

Social pulse. Trader polls lean bullish (institutional ~60%, retail ~55%) but positioning chatter notes large traders remain net short (TradingView wheat forums). That's a divergence between mood and money worth watching.

What it means. Net-short positioning against an improving supply story is classic short-covering fuel — if the bullish data keeps landing, forced buying can extend this rally beyond what fundamentals alone justify. Watch Friday's COT report for whether the shorts are capitulating.

Corn +2 Bullish

What's happening. Unchanged: one-month high (~$4.27-4.30) on France heat damage (~1/3 of crop), China's planned tariff cuts on US grains, and below-forecast US stocks and acreage (Trading Economics, AgWeb).

Social pulse. Thin and lagging — most dated chatter still reflects the earlier "sideways, supply-heavy" regime and hasn't caught up to the France/China headlines (TradingView corn ideas). No fresh contradicting signal.

What it means. When social lags a fresh bullish catalyst, the move often has room to run as the crowd catches up — supportive for the +2, with US pollination weather still the swing factor.

Soybeans 0 Neutral / mixed

What's happening. Unchanged: China's confirmed plan to cut tariffs on US soybeans offsets a bearish backdrop of building stocks, record plantings, and marketing-year-low export sales (Trading Economics, Farm Progress).

Social pulse. No fresh social signal — soybean chatter surfaced by the sweep is dominated by stale positioning posts from earlier periods (TradingView soybean ideas).

What it means. The neutral call stands on the news alone. The thing that moves this — and will light up social when it happens — is China converting tariff plans into actual cargo purchases; weekly export sales remain the tell.